A famous long-distance trader and Issaries priest, Joh Mith leads an annual caravan over the Rockwood Mountains and returns with exotic furs, spices, and feathers; occasionally even goods of dwarven manufacture. In his early 40s and rather overweight, Joh Mith carries himself well. He always has a cheering smile, friendly winks, and a good word. With his dark troll bodyguard, Joh Mith cuts an exotic figure when he is in Jonstown. He knows one of the few passes over the Rockwood Mountains into Balazar. He is an expert on the lands of Balazar. One secret that Joh Mith keeps is the existence of a giant merchant's castle in the far-off mountains to the east.

Joh is a friend and occasional business partner of Gringle Goodsell, the Issaries priest who resides in Apple Lane. He is married to Zix Porub, a lean and mirthless Issaries cultist from the city of New Pavis. He has two adult children: his eldest son Djimm Mith, who serves as his factor in the Balazar city of Trilus; and his daughter Thinelda Mith, who is married to Jorator of Clearwine.
